

TEXT about EMPTINESS as a working inspiration....

"In art, the importance of emptiness is shown in the value of the suggestion. Leaving something unsaid, the viewer has the possibility to complete the idea himself, which is how a great masterpiece captures our attention until we feel that we are really part of it. It's the emptiness in which we can penetrate and we can fill in the full measure of our aesthetic emotion."

And finally, a riddle that has some relation to our topic:

What is it, the emptier it gets the bigger it is?

Okakura Kakuzô. "El libro del té"